Consider increasing your organization's exposure at the 2019 Southeast & Caribbean Disaster Recovery Workshop. Contact Amanda Martin, awm@live.unc.edu, for questions.

Background Information

The 2019 Southeast & Caribbean Disaster Recovery Workshop will bring together the region's leaders in disaster recovery and resilience to share successful practices, discuss challenges, build relationships, and develop innovative strategies to improve disaster recovery and resilience in the Southeast and Caribbean.

The Southeast Disaster Recovery Partnership (SDRP) provides training, resources, and relationships that coastal communities need to bounce back after disaster. The Partnership connects disaster recovery practitioners from a variety of backgrounds, including emergency management, business, and natural resources. We provide a platform to engage public and private sector leaders and to help our states and communities learn from one another. Our partners lead projects that build disaster recovery in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, and we are building new relationships in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Reasons to Sponsor

- Contribute to innovation and development of best practices in recovery and resilience
- Develop cross-sector relationships with leaders in disaster recovery and resilience
- Demonstrate your organization's interest in taking part in conversations about improving disaster recovery and resilience
- Learn about initiatives in your region and in others

Quotes from Past Conference Attendees

"I enjoyed the camaraderie and willingness to provide information of individuals and organizations at the meeting."

"Great connections with other private sector people and organizations. These connections will help both from a business perspective but also in sharing ideas and experience in our pursuit of better public-private partnerships."

“I gained greater understanding of the challenges that are faced in the public sector regarding getting the community involved in sustained resiliency.”

“I met people from my state who are active in different sectors that I've not engaged, and I have since followed-up on potential working relationships with them.”

“I was able to reconnect with colleagues while making new connections, hear about recent work going in Georgia, as well as hear what the business continuity and private sector saw in the future of their work. I was also able to connect in person with a potential employer which was extremely valuable.”
